Schwinden won't defend full U-budget

By CATHY KRADOLFER
Montana Kaimin Legislative Reporter

HELENA—The university system won't get any help from the governor in defending its budget—at least not until another $6 million or so is cut.

That was the word from Gov. Ted Schwinden, who said yesterday he will take a "neutral position" on any attempts to decrease the university budget, unless attempts are made to cut below the $164 million he is recommending for the six units. Currently, the Legislature is recommending $170 million for the system.

"My position is that once it gets down to the executive recommendation, I'll defend it to the death," Schwinden said. "But I also intend to get my priorities funded."

Those priorities include prison improvements, mental health centers, state institutions and art projects.

Schwinden said the university lobby is understandably fearful of cuts in its budget. He said university officials have tried to paint an "unfair picture" of a conflict between the governor's office and the university system.

The "real culprit" in the disagreements over state funding is the Republican tax relief package, Schwinden said. And, he added, if Republicans hold firm to their promise of $107 million in tax relief, assaults on the university system budget will continue.

Schwinden and Republican and Democratic legislators are trying to arrive at a compromise on tax cuts and state spending.

One area Schwinden said he is not willing to back down on is pay increases for state employees, including university faculty and staff. Schwinden's office is projecting that it will cost approximately $54 million to fund 12 percent pay increases for state employees. The Republican leadership has said it wants to spend between $43 and $48 million for employee salaries.

Schwinden pointed out that even if the university system is funded at the level he is recommending, it will still add up to a 33 percent increase in funding.

"By anyone's standards, the universities are going to be much better off than they have been for years and years," he said.

Reservoir flushing barred by injunction

By MARK GROVE
Montana Kaimin Contributing Reporter

Flushing of the Milltown Dam reservoir was postponed yesterday after Trout Unlimited received a temporary restraining order against the Montana Power Co. and the state Department of Health and Environmental Sciences.

Bill Rossbach, a Missoula attorney representing Trout Unlimited, said the restraining order will last until 10 a.m. tomorrow, when a District Court judge will hear the groups' complaints about the state agency and MPC. The flushing originally was scheduled for yesterday.

Rossbach said Trout Unlimited wants the Water Quality Bureau, a division of the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences, to write an environmental impact statement on the effects of the flushing on fish and the Clark Fork River.

MPC wants to flush silt and heavy metals from the Milltown reservoir so the 95-year-old dam can be repaired. Trout Unlimited fears the sediments that wash into the Clark Fork will kill unknown numbers of fish.

According to Dennis Workman, regional fisheries manager for the state Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks, the flushing conducted in 1972 let enough heavy metals into the river to kill fish in test cages. He said the sediment also could smother small fish and the insects on which fish feed.

Before MPC could flush the Job Corp. may help UM, students

By DOUG O'HARRA

A special one mill levy on the ballot of today's School District One elections could indirectly benefit the University of Montana community by providing more part-time jobs, and increasing Missoula County's tax base, according to levy supporters.

If passed, the levy will raise about $130,000 from local property taxes, increasing taxes on a home with an assessed value of $50,000 by about $5. The money will be used by two local development agencies to hire a staff for the recruiting of new industry and business to Missoula, and to help existing businesses to expand.

By prior agreement with the Missoula County commissioners, about $100,000 will go to the Missoula Jobs Development Corp., and about $30,000 to the Five

Possible $14,000 deficit incurred by ASUM officers

By SUSAN TOFT
Montana Kaimin Reporter

The ASUM administration "most likely" faces a budget deficit of at least $8,000 to $9,000 and possibly as much as $13,000 to $14,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, according to Carl Burgdorfer, ASUM business manager.

The figure is not yet precise because all of the business records from fiscal year 1980-81 have not been reviewed by Burgdorfer. The difference between the high and low figures hinges on whether the University of Montana administration will agree to pick up all or part of the $5,000 cost of processing the faculty evaluation forms from Winter and Spring quarters.

ASUM President Steve Spaulding hesitated to comment on the possible deficit, saying "I hate to say if we do or don't (have a sizable deficit) because (all of the records haven't) been gone through."

The deficit also occurs on the heels of a Spaulding campaign platform stressing "fiscal conservatism." Spaulding said during his campaign that the ASUM administration under he and former President David Curtis had erased a previous deficit from fiscal year 1979-80, and were currently running "in the black."

He said that a running record should be kept up by the ASUM accountant as to how much money student groups have left in their budgets, but that this record has not always been done in the past.

But ASUM accountant Andrew Czorny would not comment on the issue, saying that any comment on financial issues would now come from the business manager's office, a new policy instigated this quarter.

According to Burgdorfer, ASUM administration had $8,015 in its budget on Jan. 31. February's expenses came to $2,944, which left $5,071 in the budget.

But a recent purchase of $2,300 worth of office equipment for ASUM depleted the coffers to just over $2,700. This amount must cover ASUM expenses from now until June 30. Those expenses include salaries, overtime for work-study students, group insurance premiums, workers' compensation insurance and employees termination pay, all of which account for a "fixed fee" of $2,200 per month, Burgdorfer said.

He added this total does not include printing costs, contracted services, office supplies, communication and travel.

Burgdorfer said that deficits occur when the business manager does not fulfill the "duty of policy setter," that policy being "whether student groups will be allowed to overrun" their budgets. He added that "it takes a little foresight to figure out how much money" a group will have to work with.

The discussion as to whom should pay for the faculty evaluation processing is still in the preliminary stages, according to Max Weiss, paralegal assistant for ASUM Legal Services. Weiss said that he was "hesitant" about discuss-

Remember the little guy

Missoula County voters — and University of Montana students who have registered here as well — will go to the polls today to vote on a special one mill levy for economic development in the county.

The levy amount — about $5 on a $50,000 house — would raise about $130,000 for Missoula Jobs Development Corp. and the Five Valleys Economic Development Council.

About $100,000 of the revenue raised would go to Missoula Jobs to hire an economic specialist and staff to help the group better plan for avenues of economic development in Missoula.

Economic development is the word for the '80s in Montana. When the Evans Products Co. shut down its plant and sawmill last year, and the Anaconda Co. decided to close its doors last September, both communities were left in grim economic straits.

Missoula Jobs offers to help prevent such a historical repetition in Missoula by helping existing businesses expand and by recruiting new industries to the area.

The concept of Missoula Jobs is a good one. With a 10.5 percent unemployment rate recorded in Missoula in February, the economy needs all the help it can get. But there are some reservations to consider.

Missoula Jobs should concentrate on helping some of the community's smaller businesses expand and not promote a plastic, K-Mart takeover of Missoula. The small businesses are made of the right stuff to keep Missoula going. They add character and perspective to Missoula that we would be sore to lose. Our first obligation should be to them.

It is also imperative that the organization be open and responsive to suggestions from the public. Perhaps monthly meetings with Missoulians could be established to express their ideas. It is, after all, their economic health that is being operated on.

The group could do a lot for Missoula and for UM students. Because of rising costs, many students are forced to find part-time work to help them make it through school. An expanded business community could help by providing more jobs.

Missoula Jobs deserves a chance, but its success depends on how much it adheres to its ideals. It must remain true to those who built Missoula: small businessmen.

Registration pains

Editor: Did your cat crap in your favorite pair of boots, is your girlfriend late again, didn't you get the classes you wanted during registration...? Well don't just sit there and take it in the shorts, BUNKY. Come on over to the sunny side of the street and try these to solve your registration blues:

- if the class you want is closed, enroll in any other course in the same department and change the numbers before you pay, BUNKY.
- register a day late and put down those classes you really want. Have a friend forge the instructor's signature and turn your form in directly to the registrar, BUNKY.
- if you want to register early, but are listed for the last day at 4 p.m., find a friend who registered early, lick his or her green stamp and press it on your registration form. Don't worry, BUNKY, no one will notice your green tongue.
- after trying all of the above and you still fail, transfer to Western, BUNKY.

Don't you think it is about time that the University of Montana catches up with the rest of the world, BUNKY? Our current form of registration went out with the dark ages.

UM scholarships

Editor: I greatly appreciate the speed with which the Kaimin produced the story about University of Montana Foundation Scholarships. Ms. Harriman interviewed me late Wednesday morning and the article appeared the following day. This constituted a yeoman effort to assimilate a lot of information and present it early, so that potential candidates for the awards could have as much time as possible to apply.

I would like to correct a few misstatements that appeared in the article, again for the benefit of the students who might be affected:

- the D. J. Shults, Big Sandy, Scholarships are awarded on the basis of merit only, not considering need, as was stated in the article.
- the Van Bramer Scholarship Fund for Billings area students provides this year two $2,000 scholarships to sophomores or juniors from Yellowstone County, i.e., students who will be sophomores or juniors during the 1981-82 academic year.
- graduates of any Helena high school may qualify for a Lulu Miles Scholarship, rather than only those from Helena High, as was stated in the article.
- finally, the scholarships mentioned in the article were unique because they are tied to a particular Montana locale. There are several undergraduate scholarship programs that exist due to the generosity of UM and Foundation donors. Students who feel they might qualify for an undergraduate academic scholarship also should contact the Financial Aids Office prior to next Wednesday's deadline. The Financial Aids Office staff, who coordinate the application process with great speed and efficiency, will provide appropriate advice, application forms and financial forms if appropriate.

New wave

Editor: This letter is in response to your article in the Entertainment section of the Friday, April 3, issue of the Kaimin. The article was entitled "New and improved new wave."

David Stevens, you do not know what you are talking about. Your article touches on some facts, but there is too much that you leave out.

Perhaps you take Rolling Stone too seriously. Some of what you say is simply not true.

Your generalizations are gross and offensive to anyone who knows anything about what is going on in music.

Missoula has little exposure to what is really happening with new music. Inaccurate information is worse than no information.

DOONESBURY

Anti-nuke Easter

Editor: "Freedom is not something you get as a present. You can live in a dictatorship and be free — on one condition; that you fight the dictatorship. The persons who fight for what they think is right, are free. You can live in the most democratic country on earth, and if you're lazy, obtuse or servile within yourself, you're not free. Even without any violent coercion, you're a slave."

— Ignazio Silone

"Be ye doers of the Word and not hearers only." — James 1:22

Easter Sunday is a memorable, symbolic day to Christians, and this coming Easter can be enhanced by supporting the non-violent protest planned at Malmstrom Air Force Base.

The tools of death located at Malmstrom are just part of a huge arsenal of nuclear weaponry that the U.S. government deems necessary for our security. President Reagan is calling for an alarmingly greater increase in the production of nuclear weaponry.

This will cost millions of dollars, which constitutes the greatest sin against the poor since it will literally take food out of their hungry mouths to finance the ultimate Death machine.

Nuclear weapons can result only in mass mega-death. It appears that the Pentagon is a huge Jim Jones, handing all the citizens of the world a large glass of grape Kool-aid. The situation indeed appears bleak.

On Easter Sunday Christ was nailed to the cross for preaching love and peace, that left us the legacy of hope. "Those who die for the Kingdom shall find eternal life." This coming Easter people will be given the chance to testify for Christ. It is our only hope to resist the bleakness of our Death State.

Phil Berrigan says that hope is the interplay between trust and promises of Christ, and the willingness to embody these promises in the way we live and in our resistance to the rule of death in our world.

Just attending the Easter action in Great Falls will be a form of resistance. Possibly some will be called to cross the line that represents death. Support for the peaceful protestors is as important as the protest itself.

I would like to close, as I opened, with a passage from Silone's book, Bread and Wine.

"Christianity is not an administration and it should not abdicate to the face of Mammon, should not support a wicked and cruel society, or offer easy careers for the ambitious. It should rather lead to prison, since crucifixion is now out of fashion."

Program survey

Editor: I am pleased to inform students that the first of many campaign promises has been fulfilled.

The students were allowed to express their preferences in Programming by the survey circulated during registration. I found the comments made by Rick Ryan rather amusing, particularly in lieu of the fact that he helped us compose the questions and create a questionnaire that would produce valuable input into Programming.

It is true that any survey is of little value if one chooses to ignore the information it produces. A similar survey was attempted in the past. Unfortunately, no adequate method of distribution was implemented. Stacks of forms were left around the campus for students to fill out at their leisure; consequently, very few forms were filled out and the results hardly indicated the wishes of the general student body.

Our survey was a carefully crafted questionnaire specifically pinpointing areas of Programming most desirable to the students in prioritized lists. It reflected preferences and guidelines without inhibiting Programming to a rigid menu. Well over 4,000 petitions were completed, erasing any doubts about the statistical validity of the survey. Had this information been utilized in the past, possibly the number of programs that have lost literally thousands of dollars of student funds and offended hundreds of fee-paying students would have been avoided.

Rick's comments concerning use of surveys as a "defense against a job poorly done" is even more ludicrous. No one working on the creation of this survey had taken office at the time the survey was created, so we certainly had nothing to defend. Could it have been the function of his own position that he was referring too?

Rick also commented that too many surveys are circulated for the information they generate. Inform Rick that thousands of corporations in all parts of the world circulate similar petitions and rely heavily on the feedback solicited by them. This omniscient attitude can only inhibit communication between Programming, ASUM and the student body at large. I certainly hope Rick's attitude is not reflective of the attitude of the rest of the Programming staff.

Bookstore out of notebooks

By KATHY BARRETT
Montana Kaimin Contributing Reporter

The University of Montana bookstore is sold out of all sizes of wire-bound notebooks, but should receive a new shipment this week, according to its general manager, Bryan Thornton.

The store opened March 30 with an estimated 7,000 spiral notebooks on its shelves to accommodate back-to-school shoppers. But by Friday, the shelves were bare.

"There's not a businessman in town that could get that order faster than I can," Thornton said, explaining that a phone order for about 7,000 additional notebooks was placed last Thursday, with shipment scheduled for last Friday.

He said arrival time is usually five days, adding that he is 99 percent sure the store will be restocked this week.

The latest order is estimated to last throughout Spring Quarter and into the summer.

The early sellout occurred despite a larger supply of the notebooks this year than for any previous Spring Quarter, Thornton said. Last spring's sales of the item totaled 4,200.

He attributed the record sellout to convenience of location to student shoppers, competitive prices and consumer awareness of the high quality of bookstore merchandise.

"Lots of our products can't be purchased anywhere in the private sector," Thornton said, explaining that as a member of the Western College Bookstore Association (WCBA), the bookstore stocks merchandise made especially for college-oriented consumers.

He said students are also becoming aware of the high quality of the paper products available through WCBA outlets, and therefore seem more selective in their purchases.

Paper products at the bookstore don't yellow as quickly as many other types, Thornton said, which is an advantage to students wishing to keep class notes for several years.

The association, which was founded in the 1920s and admits no new members, comprises 57 college bookstores. Members agree to purchase 70 percent of a vendor's annual inventory, a practice that results in a 20 to 25 percent savings to the purchaser.

Each year a five-member WCBA buying committee releases bids to vendors, and members submit product specifications. Bids are awarded in April, and in May the bookstore sends its buyer, Judith Bigbee, to Santa Clara, Calif., to order stock for next year.

This year's notebook vendor is National Blank Book, in City of Industry, Calif.

As with all businesses, Thornton said, the store would like to find an ideal way to predict sales, that would allow it to carry the lowest possible inventory while maintaining the highest level of service and selection to customers. He said he is working toward computerized inventory control, but explained that spending money for a fully computerized stock-status system would not be cost-efficient and would leave less money for customer service.

Until the shipment arrives, Thornton advises notebook buyers to shop around in the private sector. As the manager of a non-profit business, he said he is not concerned about losing customers to local competitors, but is interested in providing services to students.

"We spare no cost doing it," he said.

Faculty Senate positions are open

Nominations for new senators for the University of Montana Faculty Senate are now open, Burke Townsend, associate professor of philosophy and chairman of the Faculty Senate, said yesterday.

Nomination ballots were sent to members of the Faculty Senate yesterday and are due at Main Hall Room 221 by Thursday, Townsend said. The names of those nominated then will be placed on a final election ballot, which Senate members must vote on next Thursday. Only current Senate members can participate in the annual process.

Townsend said the new senators will take office at the Senate's April 23 meeting. He called the election process "a complete changing of the guard."

At the meeting, the Faculty Senate will also consider proposed curriculum changes submitted by the Academic Standards and Curriculum Review Committee (ASCRC).

The ASCRC reviews academic standards of the various university departments and also comments on the proposed curriculum changes.

Rivers to be celebrated

The Outdoor Recreation Center is sponsoring the second annual Rivers Week to inform people about water-related activities in western Montana.

The event, organized by Leisure Services, is being promoted as "a celebration of non-motorized river recreation."

Sue Iverson, a member of the ORC staff, said the event was started because of the interest Missoulians have shown in water recreation. "The demand is definitely there," she said.

"We want to let people know about the opportunities for recreation in the area and what outdoor-related businesses charge," Iverson said. "A lot of people don't realize that we're (ORC) here. We have a world of information about outdoor activities and we organize many trips. We encourage students to stop by. After all, they're paying for these activities."

Information booths and tables will be set up in the University Center Mall from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. today through Thursday. The daily agenda for Rivers Week is as follows:

- Tuesday — movie, "Alberton Gorge," and a seminar on raft repair and maintenance, 7 p.m., UC Lounge.

- Wednesday — seminar, "Navigating Missoula Rivers," and "The History of Canoe Design," 7 p.m., UC Lounge.

- Thursday — movie, "The River is Wider than it Seems," and a presentation of the recreational plan for the main Flathead River, 7 p.m., UC Montana Rooms 360 A and B.

Profs to give final thoughts

Three University of Montana professors will give their "final" thoughts in the continuing "Last Lecture Series" this quarter. Bill Wilmot, interpersonal communications professor, begins the Spring Quarter lectures Thursday at 7 p.m. in the University Center Lounge.

Sue Grebeldinger, lectures coordinator for ASUM Programming, said that Mortar Board selects several professors every year "that would have something of importance to leave their students with."

The lectures are free and usually last about an hour, Grebeldinger said.

Wilmot, who is not quite ready for his last lecture, said he was still working on his speech, but that he will talk about communication problems in both personal and public relationships. Wilmot, a professor here since 1972, said he likes to concentrate on interpersonal communication conflicts and two-person communications.

Jobs Corp. . . .

Valleys Economic Development Council.

Dick Ainsworth, chairman of Missoula Jobs Corp., said yesterday that passage of the levy could result in additional part-time and summer jobs for UM students. Also, he said that "anything that can help stabilize the Missoula business community" will benefit UM because they are both part of the same community.

Ainsworth, who owns Professional Consultants Inc., a local engineering consulting firm, said that Missoula Jobs will use its portion of the money to hire a professional economic development specialist and a staff. He said Missoula Jobs will look for someone who has experience in economic development, and added that when Great Falls recently advertised for an economic development specialist, many qualified persons applied. Ainsworth estimates that it will take two to three months to hire someone for the job.

Once hired, Ainsworth said the specialist and the staff will aid local businesses with locating capital for expansion and new sites, and will provide counseling on management and zoning laws. While Missoula Jobs will also work to recruit new businesses, about 70 to 80 percent of economic growth will probably come from existing businesses, Ainsworth said.

Steve Stream, executive director of Five Valleys Economic Development Council, said yesterday that the council will use its $30,000 portion of the levy to hire an "economic development technician," who will do background research for the Missoula Jobs staff.

Five Valleys Economic Development Council is funded through the Economic Development Administration by the U.S. Department of Commerce. The council provides technical and planning assistance to communities in Mineral, Ravalli and Missoula counties.

Because of the federal funding, Stream said the council can't actually go out and solicit new industry. He said the Missoula county commissioners have designated the council as the "planning arm" of the project, with the Missoula Jobs staff doing the actual "hustling."

Maxine Johnson, director of UM Bureau of Business and Economic Research, said yesterday that she supports the levy. "It's not going to create 1,000 new jobs overnight," she said, "but will create new jobs in small increments." She said the success of the levy, and Missoula Jobs, depends a lot on the hiring of quality staff.

The levy could benefit the university community by providing more jobs for graduates and more part-time work for the spouses of faculty, staff and students, Johnson said. Also, she added that as the private sector expands, so will the county's tax base, which helps support the university.

Make a Resolution

Don't Blow the Quarter!
A tutor can help you to avoid getting lost or behind in your classes. But for tutoring to really benefit you, you have to start now . . . before things get desperate.

The Center for Student Development's tutoring service is for all students and, because ASUM and the University Center provide partial funding, the cost to you is low.

Come to the Center for Student Development, Room 148, The Lodge. Let our tutoring program help you reach your academic goals this quarter.

ASUM deficit . . .

ing the issue because "any speculation would be premature."

Donald Habbe, UM academic vice president, said when the University Teachers' Union contract was negotiated, the responsibility for faculty evaluations was given to the students, at their own request.

"Along with having (the responsibility), they've got the cost," he said.

But Habbe added that he is "perfectly willing to sit down with anyone" to discuss the issue.

UTU President Howard Reinhardt, professor of mathematics, was in Helena and unavailable for comment. He is there negotiating a new contract, since the current contract expires June 30.

Spaulding said the UM administration and ASUM should share the cost of the processing.

"Since (the evaluations) would benefit both — both should pay," he said. "I can't say at this time who should pay what part."

ASUM administration originally was funded $34,000 for the fiscal year 1980-81. Through January $19,485 had been spent leaving $14,515. But a $6,525 deficit from the 1979-80 fiscal year had to be absorbed, leaving an approximate $8,000.

Spaulding said that he hopes to erase as much of the deficit as possible during his term in office. One alternative to accomplishing this, he said, would be for Central Board to set aside enough money during the budgeting process to cover the deficit. He said this action is not done for other student groups that overrun their budgets because those deficits are not as large as ASUM's.

"Maybe we can't wipe out the whole deficit," he said. "But we can start."

UM building, maintenance funds approved by legislative committee

HELENA — Construction of a new clinical psychology building at the University of Montana and money to repair deteriorating campus buildings were tentatively approved by a legislative committee yesterday.

In addition, the Legislature's Long Range Building Committee approved a variety of university requests, including handicapped accessibility and numerous art projects.

The clinical psychology building will house about 50 graduate-level students and six to eight faculty. The program is currently conducted in a home at 600 E. Beckwith Ave. and provides counseling and therapy services to about 120 clients from UM and the Missoula community.

The probable site for the new building is on the lot between the Chemistry-Pharmacy Building and the UM Federal Credit Union.

The university system's request for maintenance was also approved in full by the committee. At UM, the money will be spent for roof repairs on eight buildings, miscellaneous painting projects and improvements to bring buildings into compliance with fire and safety standards. The maintenance request had been rated at the top of the Board of Regents' priority list.

Other projects recommended by the committee include:

- $500,000 for construction of elevators and other building modifications to make campus buildings accessible to the handicapped. The regents had requested $1.4 million.

- $71,000 to fund various art projects including the Montana Repertory Theatre, restoration of UM's art collection, Montana Chataqua and leave time for Bill Bevis, associate professor of English, to write a book on Montana writers.

Still up in the air is UM's request for $8.6 million to construct a fine arts/radio-TV building. The committee will probably decide on the building today.

The committee's recommendations must be approved by the House of Representatives, the Senate and the governor.

Weather or Not

Like sharks attracted to blood, a covey of cops had converged on the corpse.

"What're you bums doin' here?"

Les knew the gravelly grunt of Sgt. Schwartz, city cop, anywhere. He slowly swiveled to sneer at the sergeant.

"Takes one to know one."

Sgt. Schwartz tapped him on the ear with a nightstick. "Hey!" "Clam up, cheese-eater, or I'll take you and your scumbag sleuths downtown."

"Buzz off, blueboy, I got my license. Can't stand the smell of an honest man, huh? Or is it you can't stand the smell of your own rotten force?"

Sgt. Schwartz hung a loog off of Les' trenchcoat.

"Sorry, Hitchcock. With the high about 44, lows near 22, scattered snow and rain showers and gusty winds, I guess the wind just caught it."

Les turned around, undid his pants, and pissed on the sergeant's police car.

"Sorry, Schwartz. I guess the wind just caught it."

Les and the sarge were old acquaintances who went way back. They hated each other then, too.

Reservoir

reservoir, it had to get a short-term permit from the Water Quality Bureau to violate water quality standards. The bureau had the option of conducting an impact statement before allowing the flushing.

However, the permit was granted without an impact statement because the bureau already knew the flushing would kill fish, Steve Pilcher, a bureau employee, said.

Rossbach said he hoped the court would decide that an impact statement was necessary, adding that it was the bureau's responsibility to protect Montana's water quality.

Dean Conklin, manager of information services for MPC, said the company will be ready to flush the reservoir tomorrow night if the court decides in its favor.

Dawson Sweeps UM indoor rodeo

IN ACTION DOMINATED BY Dawson Community College, the University of Montana-hosted rodeo went on without a hitch last weekend. Dawson was the overwhelming victor in both the men's and women's competition. The UM women's team finished second, with Staci Warburton placing first in breakaway roping. The men's team did not place in the top five and only UM's Pat Holt made it to the second day of competition. While some riders waited (below), others hung on for all they were worth (above left), and still others bit the dust (below left).

Students sold on UM Days

By CELIA GIBSON
Montana Kaimin Reporter

Tom Pacheco, a high school senior from Whitefish, said, "I am for sure going to go here (University of Montana)." A future business major, Pacheco said UM has a good golf team and "Bozeman is too redneck."

Alvin Heckford from Lewistown is interested in film and productions. He said a larger urban area would better offer what he needs, but, "it's not just what schools have to offer, but it's your environment, too."

Renne Mitchum and Brenda Lagerquist, both from Great Falls, said they are "definitely coming (to UM)." They said they have always liked the mountains in Missoula, and that UM offers a good curriculum.

These were some of the comments of more than 540 high school students from around Montana who visited the UM campus Thursday through Saturday for what Jill Fleming called a "shopper's program" — UM Days. Fleming is administrative assistant to the director of University Publications and Media Relations.

During UM Days, visiting students went through an extensive orientation, including registration and attending classes in the departments in which they are interested.

UM Days is held once a year in spring. It differs from the summer orientation program, Fleming said, because that program is designed for people who already have decided to come to UM.

UM Days is sponsored by the Alumni Association, which helps recruit prospective students, mostly from Montana.

The association employs student Advocates who volunteer to guide new students through registration, give tours of the campus and explain the various student services and facilities that are available.

Fleming said this year marked the fourth annual UM Days program. It has proved to be very beneficial; last year's program generated a 65-percent comeback of students in the fall, she said.

The students pay a $20 fee to cover room, board and activities for their three-day stay.

Petitions for $2 library fee to be circulated on campus

Petitions in favor of a proposal to charge students a $2 fee for library acquisitions will be circulated on campus, possibly today.

As soon as enough student signatures are obtained, the proposal will go to Central Board for approval. It will then go to the Board of Regents for final approval. The fee would be in addition to regular student fees, and would go into effect Fall Quarter.

Jim Brennan, CB member and member of the Library and Archives Committee, said yesterday that the proposal has been sent to the Staff Senate, the library faculty and Vice President for Fiscal Affairs Patricia Douglas. A copy of the proposal is available in the ASUM offices, and a copy will be attached to the petitions.

The fund would generate about $50,000 per year, if enrollment continues at its current rate, Brennan said, and would be dispensed by a committee consisting of two student members of the Library and Archives Committee and the acquisition librarians from the Maureen and Mike Mansfield Library.

He added that the wording of the proposal would allow only books to be purchased with the money.

Brennan said the proposal stems from the recent death this legislative session of House bills 368 and 369, which requested a total of $1.4 million for library acquisitions for the six units of the university system.

"We're saying to the Legislature, 'If you won't help us, we'll do it ourselves,'" he said.

An information meeting on the proposal will be held Monday, 3:10 p.m., in the ASUM conference room.
